MONTREAL, Quebec: It's the start of a golden jubilee year for supply chain consulting company KOM International.

Originally founded by Sydney Kom to aid grocery firms improve their distribution centre operations, the company now has 26 associates in locations across Canada, and internationally in Mexico and Chile.

Kom has evolved from a company that designed racks and introduced other materials equipment to the market into a consulting and systems integration firm.

In June the company held its 29th annual conference, which was attended by over two dozen national and international distribution companies.
